

Summer is a great time for administrators to participate in professional development

Our colleagues at the Association of Washington School Principals have a great line-up of opportunities for experienced principals, vice-principals and brand new principals. Take a look at the AWSP line-up and share this resource with your superintendent!

Space is limited, so sign up soon.

Here is the lineup from AWSP:

Something for Everyone

We've got professional learning designed to meet you where ever you are in your career, starting with our Professional Learning Continuum for principals of all experience levels. Want something specific to assistant principals? We've got you covered with our Assistant Principal Institute. Piggybacking on the success of our statewide Paper Tigers viewing and the work of the Association of Washington Student Leaders, we are offering four, two-day Trauma-Informed Multi-Tiered System of Support workshops around the state.

If you know a new principal coming into your district, do us a favor and send them to the Launching Principal Leadership page. New principals often don't know how to get started, not just with their school year, but how to get themselves into a workshop. Almost everyone who attends thinks LPL is a must-have for new principals (and we've got the feedback to show it).

Space is limited for these experiences, so sign up now. How are you going to grow this summer?
